Your student is one of a kind. Their education should reflect that.

Humanities

History, literature, and writing built around big questions and primary sources — taught in small live seminars.

Mathematics

Mastery-based math that students apply to real projects — advancing when they've truly understood, not when the calendar says so.

Science

Inquiry-driven science with hands-on investigations, real data, and projects that connect to the world students live in.

Electives & Enrichment

Students will be able to go deeper in areas like coding, design, and the arts through electives and enrichment.

"My daughter was bored at her last school. Now, she doesn't just learn about things, she makes things. She ran a whole research project herself."
